

REMARKS

Reconsideration of the subject application as amended herein is respectfully requested.

The claims have been reviewed and the informalities noted by the Examiner have been corrected.

The Examiner has rejected the claims as being anticipated by, or obvious in view of Dodge and Brownlee. In response, the Applicant has amended the claims and added new claims to recite more distinctly his contributions to the art. More specifically, claim 1 now recites a display with a housing and a case, the housing including a track formed on the housing and the case including a pin riding in the track. The claim further recites that the display includes a lock that blocks the case in the closed position. None of the references disclose the track. Moreover, Brownlee discloses a completely different type of display in which a housing has a central carousel. Dodge shows a housing with several rotating cases but no lock. Since the arrangement of Brownlee is very different from Dodge the lock shown in Brownlee cannot be used for the structure shown in Dodge. Therefore, the combination suggested by the Examiner does not teach a person skilled in the art how to add a lock to the Dodge structure.

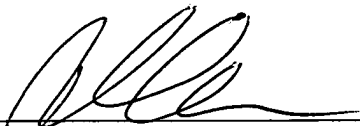

Claims 6 and 13 defines a display device with a housing and a case formed of a wall and shelves removably attached to said wall. The wall has two pins defining an axis of rotation for the case. The claims also describe that the display has a lock. None of the references cited disclose this arrangement.

Claim 19 dependent on claim 13 also describes a track limiting the movement of the case as described above.

New claims 25-28 depend on claim 13 describe details of the lock. None of the references disclose a display having a lock with these features.

It is respectfully submitted that the subject application is patentably distinguishable over the prior art of record and therefore it should be allowed.

Respectfully submitted,
